

PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, Goldman Sachs opened its Salt Lake City office in 2000 as a small operations hub of approximately 200 employees, and has since grown to a workforce of more than 3,500 professionals serving clients around the globe from Salt Lake City; and

WHEREAS, that early investment helped establish Salt Lake City as a key hub within the firm's global operations, with the office now ranking as Goldman Sachs' fifth-largest worldwide; and

WHEREAS, in 2012, Goldman Sachs launched its 10,000 Small Businesses program in Salt Lake City, providing practical education, business support, and access to capital for small business owners, improving opportunities for our local entrepreneurs; and

WHEREAS, since 2009, the firm has invested more than $950 million in Utah, supporting the creation of over 4,700 affordable housing units and expanding early education access for more than 2,000 students; and

WHEREAS, in celebration of 25 years in our community, Goldman Sachs marked the occasion by planting 100 trees in Rosewood Park, contributing to a greener future for Salt Lakers to enjoy.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Erin Mendenhall, Salt Lake City Mayor, do hereby proclaim the 16th of June, 2026 as:

Goldman Sachs Day in Salt Lake City

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Erin Mendenhall".

Erin Mendenhall
Mayor